What is the SQE?

The Solicitors Qualifying Examination (SQE) is a single, national licensing examination that all aspiring solicitors must take before qualifying as English solicitors, regardless of their professional background and qualifications. This also includes qualified foreign lawyers who were previously required to pass the Qualified Lawyers Transfer Scheme (QLTS).

The SQE assessments replaced the QLTS as the qualification route for foreign lawyers, which is no longer in force. The QLTS has been successful in attracting many applicants from various jurisdictions, who are now dual-qualified English solicitors.

The SQE is administered by the Solicitors Regulation Authority (SRA), the independent regulatory body of the Law Society of England and Wales, ensuring candidate assessment is both rigorous and fair.

The purpose of the SQE assessments is to ensure that all candidates who qualify as solicitors have the knowledge, skills and ability necessary to perform their role competently and ethically.

The SQE aims to increase consumer protection by providing greater assurance that all qualifying solicitors meet consistent, high standards at the point of admission.

The SRA has published a competence statement which defines the continuing competences it requires from all solicitors. Foreign lawyers are required to demonstrate that they have the equivalent knowledge and understanding of law and practise in England and Wales in the same areas as that required of domestic candidates.

The SRA have developed the SQE Assessment Specification, which is based on the solicitor competence statement and forms the syllabus for the assessments.

Why become an English solicitor?

There are numerous reasons to become qualified in English law. While taking the SQE will undoubtedly advance your legal career, this qualification will also improve your professional profile and knowledge, and provide you with diverse and unique opportunities.

By investing in the SQE, you are investing in yourself. Law is a respected profession in England and Wales. If you are a domestic candidate, the SQE offers you an excellent opportunity to build a rewarding and intellectually challenging legal career.

If you are a foreign qualified lawyer, becoming a dual-qualified English solicitor may open up new opportunities for you to work in London in any international law firm or in other common law jurisdictions. Or you may choose to stay in your current jurisdiction and offer additional legal services to your existing clients or advise on cross-border transactions. Whatever your reason for becoming an English solicitor, you will benefit: English law is held in high esteem and is frequently the law of choice in cross-border transactions; London is among the leading legal centres in the world and the internationally preferred seat of international disputes; and as an English solicitor, you will be a valuable and trusted international legal adviser, and will gain a competitive advantage over your peers.

Becoming an English solicitor may mean:

- Discovering new career opportunities
- Working as a solicitor in England and Wales
- Enhancing your professional profile, reputation and marketability in your home jurisdiction
- Offering a wider range of legal services to your clients
- Representing clients in international arbitrations and cross-border disputes
- Becoming familiar with a common law system
- Winning more business and increasing your revenues

How are you assessed on the SQE?

The full range of skills required to practise English law are tested on the SQE, including oral, written and professional. The SQE assessments are designed to test applicants on most of the solicitor competence statement and ensure they meet the threshold standard and legal knowledge expected of a solicitor on qualification.

The assessments are divided into two stages:

SQE I: Functioning Legal Knowledge (FLK)

This stage tests knowledge and understanding of professional conduct, solicitors' accounts, financial regulation, land law, property practice, taxation, business law, contract, tort, dispute resolution, criminal law and criminal litigation, wills and probate, the English legal system, constitutional law, equity and trusts, human rights and EU law. SQE1 is a computer-based assessment which consists of 360 multiple choice questions, divided into two single assessments of 180 questions each (FLK1 & FLK2). The SQE1 assessments last 10 hours in total. Candidates must take the two parts of SQE1 all together.

SQE II: Practical Legal Skills Assessment

This stage tests six skills: client interviewing and completion of an attendance note, advocacy, legal research, legal drafting, legal writing and case and matter analysis. The skills are assessed in the context of five legal practice areas:

Business Law and Practice, Dispute Resolution, Criminal Litigation, Property Practice, and Wills and Administration of Estates.

The skills are assessed through 16 simulated legal environments known as 'stations', which sample across the skills and practice areas. Candidates cannot choose the practice area for their skills assessment. SQE2 is offered across five days.

Assessment Rules

- SQE1 must be passed before SQE2 can be attempted.
- The two stages of the SQE must be passed within six years. Candidates are allowed a maximum of three attempts at each assessment during the six-year period.
- The assessments are closed-book and candidates are not allowed to use any materials during the assessments.

The best analogy to the SQE is a driving test: whilst SQE1 is equivalent to the theory test element, SQE2 comprises the practical component, where you are expected to demonstrate your competence in the skills required.

Eligibility criteria

Domestic candidates

There are certain eligibility criteria that candidates must meet before applying for admission to the Roll of Solicitors. You must:

- hold a degree in law or another subject or equivalent
- complete a minimum period of two years' qualifying work experience
- pass the SQE assessments; and
- meet the SRA character and suitability requirements

Candidates are not required to take any English language test under the SQE.

Foreign qualified lawyers

Foreign qualified lawyers who hold a legal professional qualification which confers practice rights in an overseas jurisdiction, are exempt from the qualifying work experience but must meet the other requirements similar to domestic candidates.

If you are a foreign lawyer and are aware of anything which might prevent you from meeting these requirements, you can apply to the SRA for an early check on any character and suitability issue prior to sitting the assessments.

Foreign lawyers are able to apply for exemption from the SQE on the basis of their prior qualifications or experience. Exemptions can only be granted from a whole component of the SQE.

The SRA may not grant a partial exemption from either SQE1 or SQE2.

Foreign lawyers who were exempt from SQE2 may be required by the SRA to take to an English language test post-admission, at the point they apply for a first practising certificate.

If you are a solicitor qualified in Scotland, you are exempted from sitting the SQE2 assessment.

Foreign candidates with a non-UK degree

If you have a non-UK degree (either in law or other discipline), you will need to show that it is equivalent to either a UK degree or equivalent UK qualification through a UK ENIC Statement of Comparability.

If you are not a foreign qualified lawyer, you will also need to fulfill the two-year period of QWE like other domestic candidates who pursue the SQE.

For any questions relating to your eligibility, to request an early assessment or seek any exemption, please contact the SRA:

Taking the assessments

Year	Assessment	Exam sitting	Location
2025	SQE1	January	UK and various venues internationally
2025	SQE2	January	UK
2025	SQE2	April	UK
2025	SQE1	July	UK and various venues internationally
2025	SQE2	July	UK
2025	SQE2	October	UK

The assessments are offered by a sole assessment provider, Kaplan, which has been appointed by the SRA.

The cost to sit the SQE1 assessment is £1,888 and SQE2 assessment is £2,902. Candidates do not have to pay VAT on SQE assessment fees. This does not include any cost of preparatory courses.

Before you can book your spot for the assessments, you will first need to register with Kaplan at the SQE website.

Candidates with special needs should contact the assessment provider with a request for specific testing arrangements.

The results of the assessments are made available a few weeks after the date of each assessment.

Admission to the Roll of Solicitors

Once you have passed the SQE assessments and fulfilled any other outstanding requirements set by the SRA, you may proceed to the next step and apply to the SRA for admission as an English solicitor.

If you do not intend to practise in England and Wales following successful completion of the assessments, you can still maintain your name on the Roll of Solicitors.

Why do you need an SQE course provider?

The assessment provider, Kaplan is not allowed to provide preparation courses for the SQE assessments.

The scope of the material, however, is comprehensive and covers nearly the entire corpus of English law. In fact, you can spend days just trying to understand what is covered by the syllabus.

In addition, current law degrees are not designed to prepare students for SQE1 and SQE2, which are practical in nature. The cost of sitting the SQE exams will run into thousands of pounds, with a limited number of attempts permitted per test.

It is, therefore, essential that you prepare for the assessments with a training provider that understands your needs and will provide you with the right guidance and advice from day one. Preparing with QLTS will help you focus on your studies, build your confidence, and save you the time, money, and effort of trying to compile your own study materials and plan.

If you want to become an English solicitor, a big factor in determining whether you'll pass your SQE assessments is the course provider itself. Without excellent teaching, informative materials, a support network and experienced staff to guide you, passing will be more difficult.

What is QLTS School?

QLTS offers a dedicated approach to the SQE assessments – on which we are exclusively focused.

We have a proven track record of hundreds of candidates who passed the QLTS assessments on their first attempt and are now dual-qualified English solicitors. You can learn about the journeys of some of our successful candidates – and advice on what works and what doesn't for those on the road to dual qualification – on our website.

While the SQE assessments differ from the QLTS, both exams are largely based on the same content, style and format. Taking the SQE preparation course with us will give you the confidence you need and ensure that you are fully prepared for the assessments. You will benefit from an array of advice and support that will be available to you all around the year.

Preparation courses for the SQE assessments

QLTS offers comprehensive, affordable and flexible preparation courses for the SQE assessments.

Our tutors and administrative staff have been attending the SQE workshops held by the SRA in London over the last several years. We have as a result designed and developed course programmes, which reflect the SQE Assessment Specification and the examiner's requirements.

Our courses, which cover each of the two stages of the assessment, enable you to study in your preferred environment, at your own pace, and to a schedule most convenient and feasible for you – whether at home, in your office or on the move.

Our courses are suitable for lawyers from different backgrounds. You may be qualified in a common law or civil law jurisdiction, have little or extensive legal experience, English may be your first or second language, and you may be working full-time or part-time – whatever your circumstances are, we'll tailor-make your training and help you succeed in the SQE assessments.

Our structured study programme will ensure that you focus on your studies – not on what to study.

- Two hours of tutor support – our tutors will answer any questions you may have about the material during your studies. The communication with the tutors will be made by email, Skype or a phone call, as may be required

The multiple choice questions, flash cards, mock tests, video library, revision notes and updates for the course materials are accessible through SQE Learning, our propitiatory online training system.

Access to the SQE Learning portal is for two consecutive sittings of SQE1 administered by the assessment provider from the date of your registration to the course, or until you have passed SQE1, whichever happens first.

Practice is key to success

The SQE is not just another standard examination. The pass mark is determined by a 'Standard Setting Panel' convened by the SRA based on the standards expected of a newly qualified English solicitor. The syllabus covers the entire corpus of English law, and you need to be well-prepared in order to pass.

If you've sat a multiple choice test in the past, you'll know that practising as many mock exam questions as possible is the key to your success. You need to be comfortable with the format and type of questions the examiner uses in the actual test. This way, you'll be prepared, not surprised, when test day arrives.

- Advocacy: learn what is involved in contentious advocacy so that you can demonstrate the role and duties of an advocate in both civil and criminal courts. This video series is designed to supplement your preparation for the advocacy assessment by providing examples of how some of the common applications which are assessed could play out on assessment day.

- Legal drafting: receive guidance on drafting commonly used documents in various contexts you may be faced with during the assessment, such as commercial contracts, board minutes, statements of case, a defence statement, and a will. The presentation will also address the right way to use precedent documents and completing forms.
- Legal research: a detailed walkthrough of completing a legal research task, from understanding the parameters of the task through to a research letter of advice or memo.
- Case and matter analysis: learn about the steps you need to take in your work, such as identifying the relevant facts and using preliminary tools of analysis, carrying out legal analysis, considering strategies for negotiation, assessing risks and client's needs, advising on the next steps, and reporting to the supervising partner.
